

LUND UNIVERSITY

Taking Metaphors back on the Streets: The case of Greek Street Art

Stampoulidis, Georgios; Bolognesi, Marianna

2018

Document Version:

Publisher's PDF, also known as Version of record

Link to publication

Citation for published version (APA):

Stampoulidis, G., & Bolognesi, M. (2018). Taking Metaphors back on the Streets: The case of Greek Street Art.

Total number of authors:

2

Creative Commons License:

CC BY

General rights

Unless other specific re-use rights are stated the following general rights apply:

Copyright and moral rights for the publications made accessible in the public portal are retained by the authors and/or other copyright owners and it is a condition of accessing publications that users recognise and abide by the legal requirements associated with these rights.

- Users may download and print one copy of any publication from the public portal for the purpose of private study or research.
- You may not further distribute the material or use it for any profit-making activity or commercial gain
- You may freely distribute the URL identifying the publication in the public portal

Read more about Creative commons licenses: <https://creativecommons.org/licenses/>

Take down policy

If you believe that this document breaches copyright please contact us providing details, and we will remove access to the work immediately and investigate your claim.

LUND UNIVERSITY

PO Box 117
221 00 Lund
+46 46-222 00 00

Taking Metaphors back on the Streets: The case of Greek Street Art

Georgios Stampoulidis & Marianna Bolognesi

Lund University (Sweden) georgios.stampoulidis@semiotik.lu.se

& Oxford University (UK) marianna.bolognesi@mod-langs.ox.ac.uk

Research on (verbo–) pictorial metaphors is primarily focused on the genre of advertising, leaving other genres under-investigated. In this study, we focus on street art, which includes posters, wall paintings, graffiti, murals and other urban expressions systematically used by street collectives as communication tools for addressing socio–political issues in interaction with the spatiotemporal contextual surroundings (Avramidis & Tsilimpounidi 2017; Chaffee 1993).

We hereby present our systematic analysis of a corpus of 50 street artworks addressing the Greek financial and sociopolitical crisis, which outset in 2008-2009. The materials were gathered between 2015 and 2017, during an ethnographic research undertaken in Athens.

From the analyses presented, we derived a model for metaphor identification and interpretation in street art, which we hereby present. The model is based on the three dimensions of meaning identified in previous research on visual metaphor (Steen 2008; Bolognesi et al., in press), which we modified and applied to the genre of street art.

Our analyses show that, although our model can be applied reliably to street art, and enable the analysts to distinguish metaphors from other rhetorical figures within these pictures, this genre usually requires several sources of conceptual and linguistic knowledge to be integrated in the analysis of the pictures, in order to achieve a successful interpretation. These include contextual information, previous sociocultural and historical knowledge, shared conventionalities, and linguistic knowledge. In this talk, we exemplify our claims, as well as our model, through several examples taken from our corpus.

With this talk, we therefore offer further contribution to the questions of how street artworks can be interpreted in view of metaphoric conceptions and how these are related to the semiotic systems of language and picture taking into account their (verbo–) pictorial interaction.

References:

Avramidis, K. & Tsilimpounidi, M. (2017). Graffiti and street art: reading, writing and representing the city. New York & London: Routledge.

Bolognesi, M., van den Heerik, R., van den Berg, E. (in press) VisMet: a corpus of visual metaphors. In Steen G. (Eds.) Visual Metaphor: structure and process. Amsterdam: Benjamins Publishers.

Chaffee, L. G. (1993). Political Protest and Street Art: Popular Tools for Democratization in Hispanic Countries. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press.

Steen, G. (2008). The paradox of metaphor: Why we need a three-dimensional model of metaphor. Metaphor and Symbol, 23(4), 213–241.