A corpus-based study on the polysemy of the attributive adjective fucking

Rasmus Tarland

1. Introduction

While discussing the possibility of investigating the polysemy of an English profanity as the topic for this essay, Dylan Glynn, who is supervising this work, pointed to an (albeit old) edition of an Oxford English Dictionary resting on a shelf in his office in order to look up the definition[s] of the lexeme fuck. However, the entry was nowhere to be found, and this only added to the interest of the topic. It is interesting how a profane word, although as common as fuck, which both men and women use frequently in speech and in written text, could be omitted from such a large and respectable dictionary for the sole reason of it being ‘profane’, ‘taboo’, and was therefore seen as unfit for academia some 40 years ago.

Putting the dictionary aside, we had to resort to other measures and decided to search for the definition online. This time we found the entries we were looking for. After reading the definitions, it was agreed that the polysemy of the verb fuck was not particularly interesting to investigate, since whether the verb’s meaning is ‘to have sexual intercourse’, or ‘to damage’, ‘to deceive or cheat’, and any other meanings the verb may have are too obvious and mostly depending on clause patterns.

Instead, it was agreed that the adjective fucking, or even the adverb fucking were better candidates for a study such as this. The former was considered more interesting, and thus this essay will investigate the polysemy of the attributive adjective fucking using a corpus linguistic approach. The definitions of said adjective are according to the online version of The Oxford English Dictionary: (1). That engages or is engaged in sexual intercourse. Also: used during sexual activity or for sexual gratification. (2). Used as an intensifier. fucking hell. (3). Inserted into a word or set phrase as an intensifier.

Another dictionary, the Cambridge Dictionary Online, lists only one definition: ‘used to emphasize a statement, especially an angry one.’ This is interesting; if a writer uses fucking in a sentence, does that typically mean that he is angry? Also, judging by the first definition provided by the Oxford English Dictionary, a sentence like “He is a fucking machine” would be ambiguous since the role of the attributive adjective could be to modify the head noun 'machine' into meaning something like 'a machine which could be used for sexual stimulation', or using the second definition, the role of the attributive adjective is to put (possibly negative) emphasis on the head noun. Is it possible to determine what the correct interpretation is? This will hopefully be answered in the Results section of this essay.

2. On polysemy

This essay is written while keeping in mind that some people who might read it may know little about previous research done in the field of Linguistics. Therefore, in this section, I will explain briefly what polysemy is, and give a few examples.

While synonymy means that a meaning can be realized as several different words, polysemy, in short, means that a single word may carry different related meanings (Ravin and Leacock 2000). Consider the following examples and explanations of the polysemous adjective fast from the article "A Corpus-based Account of Regular Polysemy: The Case of Context-sensitive Adjectives" by Lapata (2009).

- (1) a. fast programmer
- b. fast airplane
- c. fast scientist

The adjective fast in (1) receives different interpretations when modifying the nouns programmer, plane and scientist. A fast programmer is typically a programmer who programs quickly, a fast plane is typically a plane that flies quickly, a fast scientist can be a scientist who publishes papers quickly, who performs experiments quickly, who observes something quickly, who reasons, thinks, or runs quickly.

A related term to Polysemy, which may at times be hard to distinguish from polysemy, is the term, 'homonymy'. Words that are homonymous are spelled the same way, carry different meanings, but are derived from etymologically different words. Take, for example, bass the voice, which is derived from the Italian word basso, and bass, the fish, which is derived from the Old English word barse. While polysemous words may cause issues with tasks such as translation, in social communication they are rarely problematic due to people being able to pick out the appropriate meaning of polysemous words depending on context (Ravin and Leacock 2000).

3. Corpus data

For this study, the data used in the form of corpus example sentences were gathered from three different Corpora. The first being the Corpus of Contemporary American English (COCA), the second being the British National Corpus (BYU-BNC), and the third being a LiveJournal corpus created and provided by Dylan Glynn. LiveJournal is a webpage used by people to start blogs, or online journals, except these 'journals' are open for anyone to read unless the owner of one of these blogs have enabled the function to password-protect their writings. Since registration is free of charge, and for the fact that there is no age limit, a wide range of people from various social and educational backgrounds are registered.

The search criteria for the first two corpora was that the example sentences had to be from the genre of fiction. The reason for choosing the fiction genre was simply because of the quantity of examples sentences accessible by said corpora; searching COCA for 'fucking' returns 6244 results from the fiction category, and zero in the rest of the available categories. On the other hand, using the same search query on the BNC corpus returns results from all available genres, but only a large enough quantity in two of the genres: Spoken and Fiction. Because the example sentences gathered from the LiveJournal are all originally in written format, the decision to keep to written text as opposed to written and spoken was made.

3.1 Issues with data gathering

There is little to say about the COCA and BYU-BNC corpora. Gathering data from these corpora was not particularly difficult; in fact, all that is required is simply to write a word into the text-input and hit the search button. Of course, specific search queries are indeed possible, like choice of word class. Unaware of this at the time, a few hundred more example sentences than what was initially required were gathered in order to account for the possibility that some of the examples found may have not been the target attributive adjective, but the present participle of the verb fuck, or the adverb fucking. This was not as common as was initially believed, however, and only some 100 example sentences had to be omitted.

On to the LiveJournal corpus, which showed to be more problematic – most likely due to inexperience. The LiveJournal corpus the data for this study was fetched from was divided into two parts: One consisted of texts from blogs written by people registered at LiveJournal UK, and the other of texts from blogs written by people registered at LiveJournal US.

To collect the example sentences from this corpus, certain software was required because each individual blog had been saved and divided into separate text-files. A program named BB-edit was preferable to use for the task of searching through this large quantity of text files simultaneously, however, it is only available for the Macintosh and there was none available for quite some time, hence the first batch of data was gathered using a piece of software named ‘SciTE’. This proved to be problematic, because there was no way to specify the search queries: If one of these text-files had the word ‘fucking’ written anywhere within it, the software would display the entire contents, HTML-tags included, of the file and not just the sentences in which ‘fucking’ occurred.

In order to get around this problem, drastic and somewhat tedious measures had to be applied; SciTE’s built-in find and replace-function proved to be quite a useful tool on the task of removing the noise like HTML-tags obscuring the actual text. The search results found by SciTE were then saved and exported as a HTML-document. This document was then opened using the web browser Mozilla Firefox, in which a search for ‘fucking’ was made. After reading each individual sentence, they were each copied into the Microsoft Excel sheet, one by one, with the rest of the corpus examples.

One good thing about this process was the possibility of omitting sentences which did not contain the correct target word from the start, rendering the process of gathering extra example sentences redundant.

All in all, a total of 500 examples were gathered, divided equally between each corpus (examples from the LiveJournal corpus were divided between dialects).

4. Data analysis and general parameters

This section will list the different parameters used for the study, and explain the simpler ones. However, the parameters which caused difficulties and need further explanation will be discussed in separate sections.

Once all the needed data from the corpora had been gathered, the Excel document was ready to ‘code’. ‘Parameters’, or various syntactic and semantic categories were thought of and added to the document in separate columns, later to be used to generate the results in the forms of statistics and diagrams using software created for this purpose.

These were the parameters used: Example, date_fine, genre, dialect, source, lexeme, syntax_coarse, syntax_fine, main_verb, if_V_compound, NP_head, if_H_compound, NP_function, argument, possessive, figurativity, animacy, interaction, axiology, experiencer, humor, sarcasm, emotional_state, theme, and lastly – role.

There is not much to say about the first, yet most important parameter, ‘example’. It is simply the first column within the document which holds the corpus example sentences which were read, sometimes over and over again, when trying to spot the various semantic or syntactic properties of the clauses.

The years by which the fictional works were published were provided by the corpora and added to the ‘date_fine’ column, with the exception of examples fetched from the BYU-BNC, which were not published by the corpus and therefore marked as ‘unkown’ in the excel document. Example sentences from the COCA corpus ranged from the years 1990 to 1997, while examples from the LiveJournal corpus were from 2006. Genre, source (the names of the works the examples were gathered from by the corpora), and lexeme (in this case, fucking) were provided by both the BYU-BNC and COCA corpora. The genre of examples gathered from the LiveJournal corpus were marked ‘blogs’, and their source were marked as ‘LiveJournal’.

4.1 Details on syntactic parameters

The column with the parameter ‘syntax_coarse’, contains information about each example sentence’s noun phrase in which the attributive adjective fucking occurred. The first constituent of the noun phrase was written down in the form of an abbreviation of the word class that constituent belonged to. For example, take one of the corpus examples from the LiveJournal corpus (US) “sometimes i think i’m losing my fucking mind.” Here, the noun phrase “my fucking mind” consists of the determiner ‘my’, the target adjective ‘fucking’, and the head of the noun phrase, ‘mind’. This would be abbreviated as ‘DET_NP’ in the excel document. Although the determiner is indeed part of the noun phrase as a whole, ‘NP’ was simply a way to mark that the target adjective plus the noun head was succeeded by a determiner in the phrase. In case another adjective preceded the target adjective, it was marked 'ADJ', while 'PP' was used if a preposition preceded the noun phrase (if that case, the phrase was also marked as a prepositional complement in the 'NP_function' category). The actual word and not the abbreviation of the word class it belongs to was written down in the 'syntax_fine' category, meaning 'DET_NP' would decode into 'my_NP'.

The main main verbs of the sentences containing the target adjective were written in the main_verb category, however, if no verb was present, or in case the verb happened to be a compound, they were marked either 'omitted', or 'compound'. For the latter scenario compounds were written in full in the 'if_V_compound' category to keep the data sorted. Another category was made, 'occurrence_verb', to mark whether the verb was omitted or present in the example sentences.

'NP_head', contrary to the two syntax parameters, contains the noun spelt out from each example sentence, would the noun happen to be a compound, like 'wedding ring', it was written down in the 'if_H_compound' category instead to keep the document as tidy as possible.

The most troublesome of category of all syntactic categories to code was the category 'argument'. Here, the function of the noun phrase at clause-level (subject, object, predicative, and adverbial) was marked. Due to the format of the corpus examples from COCA and BYU-BNC, some examples had to be removed due to sentences ending abruptly or being cut short in the beginning.

Lastly, the syntactic parameter, 'possessive' was used to mark whether examples in which the noun phrase containing the target word were preceded by a possessive pronoun or not.

4.1.1. Details on semantic parameters

While the syntactic parameters were somewhat unproblematic to code due to previous knowledge received through English grammar and syntax classes, some of the semantic categories caused multiple issues, which resulted in going back and forth in the data in order to double-check for errors or at times even due to changes of heart.

The figurativity category was used to mark whether the heads of the noun phrases were used in a figurative or non-figurative manner. For example, here's another example from the data collected from the LiveJournal (US) corpus: "So yes as I was exhausted yesterday from all the mental and physical effort today I look like I was molested by the fucking grim reaper!” Here, the writer uses a metaphor to describe his or her looks and would therefore be marked as ‘figurative’.

On to the animacy category; if the target noun phrase was functioning as a predicative or part of a conceptual metaphor, modifying the property of a human or any other living or animate object, even though the head of this noun phrase was an otherwise inanimate object, it was marked as animate in the data. A sentence like “That guy is a fucking boot” for example, would be marked as animate. However, as a result of vagueness, it was at times hard to draw the line between animate and inanimate objects. Would something like an artificial limb be considered an animated object when attached to a human, while inanimate when it is attached to an inanimate object? Due to the importance of animacy and animacy hierarchy in language it might be expected for it to be a well-understood linguistic category. This doesn't seem to be the case, however (Zaenen et al, 2010).

Now to the parameter ‘interaction’. Here, the example sentences were either marked with ‘private_sphere’, or with ‘social_sphere’ depending on who or what was being addressed by the writer of, or the speaker in the sentences. Whenever someone or something was being addressed within the ‘private sector’, like family members or people otherwise close to the speaker, included oneself, was marked ‘private_sphere’. When people or things distant or unknown to the speaker from the ‘social sector’ were addressed, the sentence was marked with ‘social_sphere’. A typical example of a sentence marked with ‘private_sphere’ would be “You were a warrior woman, Mom. You were a fucking hero!” (from COCA) while a sentence such as “it just isnt my style to really get in depth with this sort of thing. but still, bush is a fucking asshat.” (from LiveJournal US) would be marked with ‘social_sphere’. Most example sentences consisting of dialogue between two or more people were marked with ‘private_sphere’, unless it was made clear from the dialogue that the speaker did not know the addressee personally.

Factors affecting the axiology of the example sentences included the neutrality of the verb (be versus emotionally loaded verbs like hate and love), and the head of the noun phrase (he is a fucking man versus he is a fucking douche bag). However, due to fucking being initially thought of as an attributive adjective affecting the main noun in a negative sense, second opinions on the choices whether it affected the sentences in a neutral, negative, or positive way would be required for the axiology category to be truly considered viable.

The 'experiencer' category was concerned with who was affected by the utterances in the sentences. The experiencer could be an individual, or a nation. No example sentences were found where the experiencer could be considered anything else than 'individual': "I can't believe I lost my fucking money, i'm now skint for the month." (from LiveJournal UK), or 'nation': "America, you got your eyes open so wide you can't see a fucking thing." (from COCA), and because it seems the vast majority of examples were concerning individual people, extremely few example sentences were marked 'nation'.

Because the format of the example sentences, the 'humor' category also caused some difficulties; a fictional work which may have consisted of a humoristic character that ends all his or her sentences in a humoristic sense, which could not be considered so without proper context, was ignored and marked as non-humoristic. Only obvious statements meant to humor the reader were marked as humoristic. Consider the sentence "sorry for all the depressing posts lately. i blame it all on the pants. fucking pants. you're a jerk. you're not magical at all." (from LiveJournal US). Likewise, the 'sarcasm' category was affected by the same difficulties, and sentences were thus only marked as being sarcastic in case they were quite obviously so: "OH MY GOD. sotp the world, melt with me, i am writing on my fucking livejournal. crazy." (from LiveJournal US).

The next category, 'emotional_state' is the category which has caused the most frustration and difficulty. Because of some dictionaries defining fucking as being an adjective used for emphasis, signaling emotions like annoyance, and since almost all example sentences were emotionally loaded, it was decided that the task of categorizing the emotional state of the writer was important. The category needs further explanation, hence some examples of some of the emotional states marked in the study will be brought up to attention.

Examples signaling 'annoyance' were marked so whenever it was somewhat clear the speaker was troubled and annoyed with what the utterance was about, consider "My fucking iPod has decided to die, for no reason other than it's fucking stupid!!" (LiveJournal US). Most sentences marked with 'worry' were statements about an individual's physical or mental health: "I've just had the monthly conversation with my Dad about how he wished I ate more things, and I really agree with him, I wish I ate more, I have a fucking eating disorder." (LiveJournal US). Sentences were typically marked with 'joy' if the writer of the sentence was in an obvious joyous mood, or was writing or speaking of something that had caused the individual to feel joy: "FUCK GUESS WHAT? I WAS OFFERED A FUCKING JOB TODAY!!!!!!" (LiveJournal US). The same case for the emotional state ‘sadness’: “I feel so ill. not as in, oh i feel sick .. i mean like ill, maybe ill in the head i don't have a clue, i dnt no who i am anymroe and its killing me so much each fucking day.” (LiveJournal UK). The category was then further divided into another category, ‘emotional_coarse’, containing information whether the emotion was negative (anger), or positive (joy).

This task was easier with the corpus examples from the LiveJournal UK and US corpus because they were more often personal thoughts or beliefs in written format, so it was easier to see things from the writers’ point of view, contrary to the example sentences from the genre of fiction which featured a lot of dialogue, causing problems with context. As with the axiology category, this category would likely need second, if not third opinions due to uncertainty while marking these examples. A few copies of the datasheet in which all categories were removed with the exception of ‘example’, and ‘emotional_state’ were sent to some acquaintances. Unfortunately, they all had their own ongoing projects at the moment, and thus none completed the task in time. Unfortunately, the possible results made with this category can therefore only be seen as speculations, if anything.

The next category, ‘theme’, was used to categorize the themes of the example sentences. Most were marked ‘relations’, meaning the example sentence consisted either of dialogue, or it was an utterance concerning someone or something which the speaker personally knew in one way or another.

The last category, perhaps the most important one in this study, is ‘role’. Here the role of the target word was specified. All of the occurrences of the attributive adjective fucking in the example sentences gathered were found to be used for emphasis.

5. Results

In this section, some tables containing statistics from the coded data and plots generated using multiple correspondence analysis will be presented and explained.

Accepting the fact that no Kappa test has been used to test whether the categorization of emotion of speakers/writers can be considered as viable, or if it is all nonsense or subjective, the following tables show what emotions occurred within the different dialects and genres. People who use fucking in their language seems to be generally annoyed with somebody or something, as it is the most prominent emotion of the 500 coded example sentences. There is some variation; the emotions such as ‘frustration’, ‘joy’, and ‘worry’ may be less or more frequent than others depending on dialect and genre. However, judging from table 5, the majority of people who used fucking in their language seem to be affected by, or want to show they are affected by negative emotion, such as ‘anger’ and ‘frustration’.

Figure 1 is a multiple correspondence analysis generated with the statistical software program called ‘R’. The way the program works is that it calculates the frequency of the co-occurrence of the inputted parameters, and converts these frequencies to spatial distances. The closer one parameter is to another, the more correlated they are (Glynn, 2010). In this figure, we see a correlation between the factors ‘negative_e’ and ‘non_figurative’. This means that, according to this plot, in both dialects (since the cluster appears in between ‘US’ and ‘UK’), someone who is affected by, or wants to express negative emotion is likely to use a head noun modified by fucking in a non-figurative way. Concrete nouns that are modified by fucking seem to be more related to the American dialect.

However, below is a logistic regression report on the data, and it shows that only the ‘non_figurative’ parameter is statistically significant, its P-value being 0.0351, meaning that there is a roughly a 99.96 percent chance these results would be identical in a study made using the same method.

Figure 3 shows that the themes ‘school’, ‘medicine’ and ‘entertainment’ occur more frequently in examples with their referent being inanimate objects, and a relation between the theme ‘relations’ and animated objects. It seems the themes ‘politics’ and ‘economy’ were more frequent in the British examples, while ‘technology’ and ‘crime’ occurred in American example sentences. The theme ‘relations’ falling in between the UK and US parameters show that said theme occurs about equally often in the coded examples using the parameters to generate this plot.

Unfortunately, either most plots generated using the coded data results in diagrams consisting of illegible noise, suggesting the analysis is poor or that the wrong factors are being put to use to generate the diagrams, or, the data analysis shows to offer poor statistical significance, meaning that there is a larger chance the study cannot be reproduced with the same results.

5.1. The meaning of fucking and speculations

Briefly mentioned in the last paragraph of section 4.1.1., the attributive adjective fucking, in all of the 500 gathered and coded example sentences, had the same meaning or sense; to put emotional (negative or otherwise) emphasis on the word it modified. This supports the statement in a previous study made by Jay and Janschewitz (2007), which states that the reason why we curse in language is to “express our emotions and convey our emotions to other people”.

There were no apparent signs found for the adjective to have modified any head noun in the examples in the sense to give them the property of being objects used for sexual stimulation, even though this is the first listed definition of the adjective provided by the online edition of the Oxford English Dictionary. Yet, a quick search on the Internet for “a fucking machine” clearly states that this definition is indeed used. The reason why no sign of this usage was found in the coded examples in this study may be many, like variation between the written and spoken dimensions, and the choice of the source for the gathered examples: This kind of usage may be more common in certain types of magazines, in contrast to the usage within certain types of fictional works. Also, while based on intuition, in speech, the pronunciation of an object like a ‘fucking machine’ used for sexual stimulation, and when fucking is used to put emphasis on the head would vary in a way that when it is used for emphasis the head noun would receive stress, and thus would not cause any problems in social communication.

6. Summary

This corpus-based linguistic study was made using 3 different corpora: The COCA, BYU-BNC, and LiveJournal corpora. The genres the corpus examples were gathered from were within the genre of 'fiction' from the COCA and BYU-BNC corpora, and 'blogs' from the LiveJournal corpus. A total of 500 corpus example sentences were analyzed for this study (250 British examples, and 250 American examples), more example sentences were gathered (and later omitted) in case the target words in said sentences were not the attributive adjective fucking, but the adjective fucking or even the present participle of fuck. The example sentences were then coded with the use of various syntactic (like NP_head, and possessiveness) and semantic categories (like emotional state and presence of humor).

Although this study does not show any evidence of the attributive adjective fucking being polysemous, it could be concluded from this study that people who use said attributive adjective in language are likely either annoyed or angry, or affected by any other 'negative' emotion. Yet, since this study was not based on multiple individuals' coding, and no Kappa test was ever made to prove the category of the writers' or speakers' emotional state, or other categories which may have been subjective, this result cannot be considered significant.

Things that made today suck: a certain person and their fucking mood swings. one minute your pissed, the next your all chipper, then your breaking down all you can do is ask stupid fucking questions. EVEN when you said youd stop and try to think before you speak. So what do I do tomorrow when I'm trying to register for classes and I can't because I have a hold on my account and there is no fucking number on there the fucking hockey game isnt on tv tonight, thats fucking gay. im done...be prepared for another update within the next 6 months.... for the 2 of you that read this, there is a show next week in clearwater and you all should go. its for my fucking birthday so i better see you there. im such a fucking moron. i have thisnew medication which makes me groggy in the morning, almost the reverse of ambien where im sleepier in the morn 2 nights ago i went into the managers office and went through their drawer to get my schedule for this week, but they seem to have a fucking problem wi and i hope if the bitch im talking about reads this, that they go suck a fucking dick. it just seems as if i am not working hard enough or its taking way to long! Im almost graduated and i cant find a fucking job. Didn't they read Mein Kampf? The entire fucking plan is laid right out there, almost a decade before WWII broke out. why did you call me? Her response "Oh, I forgot we aren't talking anymore." I WISH PEOPLE WERENT COMPLETE FUCKING IDIOTS ALL THE T my beach in mel has no people, we park right on the fucking beach, huge ass waves, like 40 feet of skim...its fucking heaven. i swear to the fucking devil i heard them say that shit. thats when i quit praying and telling that nigger my problems... then those two little girls fuck eachother up and whoever wins gets the ball? look little girl, em i don't want your fucking ball i have a fucking final on monday and a paper that was due on monday that i have to finish and of course my notes are in that fucking book i'm being threatened by the university to be kicked out of housing because my roommate moved out and the fucking douchebags just tell me to expect a r it just isnt my style to really get in depth with this sort of thing. but still, bush is a fucking asshat. a couple of reminders: dont attempt to carry 2 drinks in a fucking bag. we have drink carriers for a reason. We can land on the fucking moon, put little robots on Mars that can run around the fucking planet for a year and not die but we can't make TV's that don't And i sit there trying to keep you happy, im a fucking puppy, im a puppet you dangle. You feel pressure, you feel depression, but your not alone. we did laundry while playing connect 4...p.s. i am the fucking champion! I mean, can you even DO that with fucking movies like Elizabetown or any stupid boring indie romance flick? no fucking way! pints of Leinie's Berry Weiss and suffer the exquisite torture that is a Berry Weiss hangover the next day) (yes, i should go to fucking bed) school is starting soon and I'm all fucked up. And...I need to sell my fucking books. i hate this. i am not allowed to go on the net by my fucking foster parents I just got home fifteen minutes ago. I am drunk and my room mates boyfriend is snoring like a fucking warthog. I just went to put my clothes in the dryer and there was a fucking plastic bag on top of a broom or some shit behind the basement door and I thought it w I just want to finish this fucking paper! And go to sleep. I have a page to go if I finish with my original idea. COKE?! IT'S A FUCKING DRINK!!!! What's next, Starbucks shrines? Sometimes this is all just bullshit and I don't mean a fucking word I say because...well I am full of it. I am finished with waiting for people who are always late. Get a fucking watch and have some consideration. OH MY GOD. sotp the world, melt with me, i am writing on my fucking livejournal. crazy. Well, it was bound to happen eventually. A REAL FUCKING POST! Sorry for the EXTREME delay kids, haven't really had the time nor the inclination I can't stop dwelling on all these things, and I am very quickly losing my fucking mind, only unlike him, I don't have the pleasentries of meds and therap It's this type of shit that raelly makes me wonder if friends are really worth the fucking hassle because it seems to me that I have about maybe 2 people in That was cool. Had a LOT to drink, and danced my ass off. SO MUCH FUN!!!!!! I knew there was a reason that thing stuck in my mind for a fucking n i got my new TV in yesterday and i'm still setting it up. i'm currently waiting for time warner to send me my fucking HDTV box. I am so incredibly annoyed with ppl who for some reason find it okay to SCREAM in a fucking coffeehouse so loud that everyone else raises their voices That was the one place I had left on this fucking campus that allowed me to escape those migranes. You need to make sure that you do the follow up and we will never be placed in this type of situation. Maybe I'm just being too sensitive, but I've had it v I basically can't stand the fact that I like someone SO much and they don't like me back and they never will. It's the worst feeling in the fucking world. but my mother decides that we need LOTS OF FUCKING FOOD THAT YOU HAVE TO ADD A BUNCH OF SHIT TO TO MAKE THE GOD DAMN im sorry...but im not going to eat fucking tuna fish all the damn time...nor am i going to be eating shredded cheese! And they stole my awesome jansport bookbag, with god knows what was in it. And they stole my fucking camera with pictures from graduation n such o Karma's a bitch motherfucker. I hope you choke on your fucking crack rock that you sold my stereo for...Anyways I got my window fixed for free today Yup so today was like the best day ever br minus the fact that jill's a fucking retard facial piercings, jeans...thats it...well I have to wear shoes but thats an obvious.... I don't care about the piercing cause I need a fucking job..

So yes as I was exhausted yesterday frum all the mental and physical effort today I look like I was molested by the fucking grim reaper!

when i got home from doing dishes i had to fuckin do a whole load bc they couldnt wash their own and decided to cook all teh freakin food in teh hosue !

When I'm looking for a cake recipe and I find one that sounds interesting and the first ingredient is "box of yellow cake mix". That's not a fucking recipe

I don't want drugs. I just want to be better. I want to be dependable and not dependant for once in my fucking life!

Thank you for fucking up my mood today, I hope the neighborhood kids egg the shit out of your fucking car my fucking computer at school doesnt work. i want to go home. fuck off.

I have no comments on this one other then I've said it once and I'll say it a 1,000 times, Spider Song is a fucking boyscout

i want a fucking break. i wanted to get away goddamnit. why does she think i showed up and two in the morning

I HATE YOU COMCAST. I HATE YOU COMCAST. I HATE YOU COMCAST. pulls hair out god why are these fucking people so fucking STUPID

so I'm pissed..beyond pissed, so I have to scroll through my phones contact list, find comcast's fucking number

I love him so much. And yet, I want to claw his fucking eyes out a lot of the time.

it kills me to see how some ppl can be so selfish and self-centered...especially when it is ur own FUCKING FATHER...

Makato Yukimura is a fucking genius, i'm only have way through the PLANETES series and i don't want it to end.

I dreamed of you. I cried in the shower. And you're always in my fucking head. Leave me alone.

I FUCKING HATE THAT BASTARD OF A FUCKING EX. HE MAKES ME WANT TO JUST BREAK THINGS, STARTING WITH HIS FUCKING !

If you've got a fucking problem solve it with your fists. Stop being a turd pansy!

VOLDEMORT JUMPED AROUND THE GRAVEYARD AS IF HE WAS A FUCKING GYMNIST.

Today I was listening to it while passing through the kitchen to get something to eat and I heard him say that exact fucking phrase, no lie dude.

And i fucking have to clean up that stupid bitches messes, she can't be a fucking ADULT and do it herself.

He's a fucking asshole, he doesn't do anything for himself and sits around being lazy while my mother works her ass off for him.

I really wish people wouldn't argue with me on the subject of Mr. Lesatz's death. No, it was not a fucking heart attack, and I know that for certain. What's i need a fucking break man i feel dissoriented and derranged and delusional

I am sweating my fucking ass off. I think I am dehydrated too. I have been acting as Mommy for my brother and it is about time I have a talk with a frien

I need to take the keys away from my brother and then wring his fucking neck.

Oh yeah so get this my fucking computers Hard drive decided to die. so I don't have a computer.

sometimes i think i'm losing my fucking mind.

Listen up you pork fried bitch, if you wanna talk shit, say it to my fucking face and oh yeah, happy fucking birthday. and MONIQUE? what the fuck? am i now one of your fucking customers? fuck that.

it's christmas night, 11:00 p.m. midnight eastern time. think i got a fucking phone call or a christmas card, even a fucking email?

I've had insomnia like whoa lately. When I do sleep, however, I've had some strange fucking dreams.

I am a fucking nerd.

Shouldnt I be part of a happy couple? Id date a fucking monkey if it meant taking my mind of you.

my fucking headlights dont work again. and my dad being the jerk he is, wont fix them today.

When I was a kid my best friend dressed up like a bee and tied me up. so well, in fact, that her mom had to cut the fucking rope with a knife.

FUCK GUESS WHAT? I WAS OFFERED A FUCKING JOB TODAY!!!!!!

I miss interaction with my peers. I miss learning. I'm going to relearn Calculus tonight so I don't feel like such a fucking retard.

BUT everyone was surprisingly gentle with my small 5'2" frame, especially when I was in the VERY FRONT :) AND dylan CAUGHT the fucking DRU and thats because hes an asshole and hates me for eating my fucking lunch in the hall last year but when i got home my fucking dogs woke up BOTH my parents. so im fucked. for a while anyway lets not pretend, we all know each others business... so my resolution is, to have some fucking fun

WHAT THE HELL are you GUYS like to GOOD to leave me FUCKING comments... i dont get it...

Everyone's buying fucking magazines! What the hell! Don't you people know that we sell BOOKS?

Were going to Abercrombie tomorrow. Damn our useless mall. Have to drive all the way out to fucking Naples.

I'm putting fucking razor blades in his next pizza. I guess now even total strangers can tell I suck at life.

sorry for all the depressing posts lately. i blame it all on the pants. fucking pants. you're a jerk. you're not magical at all.

Im not going to lie if I wernt scared of dying and everything id do it, not for attention, whoever would do that is a fucking dumbass.

It's like... a billion degrees out, and I had to walk a mile in it earlier. A FUCKING MILE!

well. it feels like i haven't done this livejournal thing in awhile. my fucking car was in the shop all day and htey didnt even have time to look at it yet.

God. Why does it always take him so long. Finally we're here. Its been another fucking half-hour.

I've got something to say to you Twenty minutes of praise. Everytime he reads Glass, hes got the biggest fucking smile on his face.

People on the internet can be fucking idiots....

CAN U PPL.PLZ LEAVE ME COMMENTS ON MY ENTRIES IM ABOUT TO FRICKEN DELETE MY FUCKING LIVE JOURNAL BECAUSE NC

He's only in National Guard for God's sake... he shouldn't be going there. There are too many young guys and girls dying in this fucking war...

Bush probably just wants the fucking OIL...

Right now my car is getting its transmission checked. They said it would be ready by sat bc i needed it... fucking liars.

Yeah well then thats pathetic. Screw fucking college... I will be a bum like their other kids.

No matter how much I stay out of people's fucking lives and try to make myself disappear everyone seems to want me to be in the middle of the fucking

i had the weirdest fucking dream last night br me, my mom, my sis, and one of my moms friends went to a strip club but it was closed and the owner felt Actually the only thing that went wrong was she had to wiat 2 min for her spoon. Big fucking deal.

Anybody care to do their old friend, Jon, a favor and just slam a fucking bullet in his head? I'd be more than happy 2 repay you in the next life.

aw daisy... it happened again. you fell for the wrong idiot. wow! you should write a fucking romance novel...

i have been having these fucking asthma attacks too. it sucks.

Fucking school starts september 9th. how scurry. Seriously it sucks and im quite annoyed by it all.

My fucking mother decided to do my laundry, and put fucking bleach in my colored shit...

Stop being a hypocrite. I hate every fucking wannabe/gonna-be/trying-to-be scenester fuck out there.

I haven't had a good night's sleep in so long. I desperately need one. Rent is due today. I need a fucking job.

i'm tired of people expecting this fucking greatness out of me like i'm some kind of god.

I would do anything he told me 2....if i could....if he spoke 2 me as a person...and thts wot i am...a fucking person!!!!...i hav feelings u no!! :(

I went to fucking Lazer Quest and got the high score of the day, pweened!!

its going to be really hot in berlin so i know im going to be coping horribly. i hate the fucking sweaty heat that is summer. be warned.

Wonderful season, Christmas. Everyone talks to each other and shares goodwill to all men. Just DON'T DO IT IN THE MIDDLE OF THE FUCKING P?

i seem to be saying a lot of things lately i don't mean, or don't want to mean. i never want to do that with her. god though, talk yr mixed fucking signals. I

my heart is a fucking paperweight. i am - ugly, stupid, angry, cowardly, i get drunk too often, i take drugs too often, i do all these stupid things for sympa

i'm not listening to some bad post-grunge while someone i can't even really tell what they look like since it's dark and i'm drunk has her hands upon me a

My Dad now has no fucking job cause of some stupid fucking politics shit! Could it get any better?

All i really need to say is that i had a fucking fantastic time and enjoyed every second of the whole event (yes, that includes the rain too!) mostly due to t
My mum. Wearing my bitch boots. My mum! Not only that, she's decided to wear them with a wenchy skirt like me. I feel like a fucking doll.
it was a shit day (weatherwise), but great to be with people i care about and we had loony fun even tho the weather was shite and i kept running into fuck i think i really need a fucking guitar .. i wanna play bass, i wana be creative and do somethin with my life, so for once, i'll make people proud of me... i hate fucking school its bollocks and does fuck all for ones personal happiness... whatever.. well look it's me, back again. fucking hell i dunno why i'm updating this shitty waste thing but i suppose BOREDOM drove me to the fucking egde.
you know what the saddest thing is? i can't have a fucking cigarette for a very long time. i mean 6 months. it's so fucked up. how the FOCK does anyone i have so much anger against women it's just too bad, OH WELL. FUCKERS. it's like they're the fucking goddesses of the universe or some pish and men i dunno what will make me happy. one thing's definite though. i'm not getting a fucking job. nor am i getting myself a shitty degree.
i've already skived the fucking semester. getting letters from the uni saying why i've been ditching.
no matter how boring this day is, i love my music. nothing beats a little insanity, yanno? OH LOOK THE RIVER CLYDE!!!!!!!!!!!!1111111111 br br W/sometimes, i don't know why i have this fucking thing. other times i feel like ripping open someones brain and taking a nice sample of it.
I get a little bit angry and I know I've got to get out and cry... God what is priceys fucking problem? he was being fine with me the other day...and now he
I dont wanna talk bout it to much its just i feel kinda bad at the moment. Jusr memories coming back to me making me feel terrible... making me hate my Argh! This fucking remortgage is going to kill me.

Why can't people just accept things! They have to push it! FUCKING RETARDS!
Meet in Cork and Bottle pub, get onto boat, drink a little bit, dance on a literally rocking dance floor, queue for taxi for fucking ages
It was so funny! Catchphrase of the day delivered by Tash: "Owen, a chicken is NOT a fucking pet!"
I grin, figuring he'll realise how dumb he was being, but no, he answers the fucking thing and says, br "Hullo?...Hullo?...Hullooooo?
I read today that George Bush has gotten personally involved in the Northern Ireland peace protest. Please God shut his fucking mouth.
Mam, I'M SO SORRY I CAN'T EVEN CLEAN UP TO YOUR FUCKING STANDARDS. SORRY I'M SUCH A DISAPPOINTMENT.

Tony is not just a great frontman, he's a fucking professional, he got that band to performance level in like 2 weeks and they were tight. at this rate next I hear them they'll be up to scratch, oh and the R.A.T.M song? Hell yeah! An Expensive Place to Die were ok... if the singer would get of fucking northern ireland politics

Why is it the whole fucking world seems to stop all because some fucking tramp got nailed to a tree 2000 years ago???

OK, I have managed to persuade everyone in my office that to cut back on our swearing at work we should, rather than get a lame fucking swear jar, swe. They gave me a fucking essay on Paradise Lost. Well, a 'commentary' on the first 26 lines, which is apparently half as long as an essay, but probably long Did I witness today none other than Albus Dumbledore heading off to visit Tom Riddle at the orphanage?! Do I just need to get a fucking life?

IGNORE THIS! ITS A FUCKING RANT

got my fucking jack johnson tickets, so happy! hammersmith sold out in 5 minutes or less, and i'm gonna be there.

God you know how pathetic that stupid whore is she blocked me so I can't talk to her! What a fucking pussy! She has messed with the force once more, I I also got that I dont call her enough and dont listen to her enough. I've put my most into the fucking relationship and she just sits there and moans!

Yeah so no fucking excuse....just do it!

And all it turned out to be was a stupid block of air trapped in it, restricting the damn water flow. Fucking cars, can't they just be simple to fix... 'Prongs you git how could you not match with me?! We go as a pair every fucking year!' He's so annoyed it's surprising his hair doesn't stand on end. so i go the chemist to pick up my photos....and they seem to have lost some! LOST ONE OF MY FUCKING FILMS! now i wouldnt be so angry if this w its matts birthday today. i cant even go and see him because i have to go to fucking work, it takes the piss.

GRRRRRRRRRRRR NO FAIR!!!!!!!!!! String art sucks monkey balls! I have to redo my entire program cuz she wan't it in a fucking rectangle!!!!

my mums having another psycho fit being a total fucking cow just because her life is shit. yeah thats really helpful throwing my stuff away and calling m last night went to portsmouth and it was one of the best fucking nights ever! emma and vicky graduated today (im so proud, got emma the green powerpt I've just had the monthly conversation with my Dad about how he wished I ate more things, and I really agree with him, I wish I ate more, I have a fuckir My fucking iPod has decided to die, for no reason other than it's fucking stupid!!

The thing is, i am now being blamed for the floor in the kitchen being sticky, i have not fucking been in the fucking kitchen.

why don't i follow my own fucking rules? never trust anyone, never must now learn this. fucking hate people arghhh my stomach has been playing up again its a fucking nightmare! can't do anything but lay down and eat plain foods!! sucky!!

London was fucking terrific same as always, the only damper being fucking livejournal delaying comments, although who in their right mind would wan I feel like a fucking schoolboy again about to go on a blind date.

Oh yes, because sister is so amazingly perfect isnt she. Just because the fucking bitch never took drugs, or got overly drunk, or had sex underage or had b I can't beleive I lost my fucking money, i'm now skint for the month.

I wanted to take her out to a japanese restuarant but it was shut due to plumbing and would be open on thursday (just my fucking luck) meh im bored. tis gunna sux0r this week and well...every week from now. summer has gone. well i guess only technically since the fucking sun has decic He lets Megan off with doing only 2 subjects, but no i have to do fucking 3, how shite and unfair is that, fucking idiot.

I have had a rather shitty day at school. I had to file another fucking report on another fucking chav.

Me and Helen were up till 3 this morning catching a fucking mouse. br One of the cats thought it would be highly amusing to bring in a MASSIVE live : She denied ever going on my MSN this morning.. forgetting she had already confessed! I'm SICK of her yelling abuse at me from across fucking rooms.

Oh god as if I'm moving ANYWHERE in this weather. I only need to turn my fucking head and I start sweating.

My headteacher can ram his fucking head up his fucking arse before I shove it there! He is such a fucking cheeky bastard, and he started having a go at n EVERYONE AT MY UNIVERSITY IS A FUCKING TOSSER. AND I THINK THEY SHOULD DIE

Not a snorter, I know people who snort up lines through rolled up £50 notes for a laugh. Waste of a fucking note.

They never realise how much I care about what happens to them and so they don't understand what I want/need in return. Tonight, for instance, just one
